

Obtaining Legal Assistance

Individuals, including married couples, can file bankruptcy without an attorney (“pro se”) but we strongly recommend that you obtain legal counsel. Bankruptcy laws can be very confusing, and you will be expected to follow the same rules and procedures that an attorney would if you represent yourself. Failure to do so could result in dismissal of your case or other sanctions. The following resources are available to you if you wish to retain an attorney and are interested in learning about qualifications for receiving pro bono (free) or reduced fee legal representation:

Non-Attorney Petition Preparers

If you file bankruptcy pro se, you may be offered services by non-attorney petition preparers. By law, petition preparers can only enter your information into the bankruptcy forms. They are prohibited from providing legal advice, explaining answers to legal questions, or assisting you in a bankruptcy court. A petition preparer must sign all documents they prepare for you and include their printed name, address, and social security number on the documents. They must also provide you a copy for your records. Petition preparers cannot sign documents on your behalf or receive payment for court fees.
